 STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE
 PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION
 DW 14-300
 AQUARIUM WATER COMPANY OF NEW HAMPSHIRE, INC.,
 Water Infrastructure and Conservation Adjustment
 2015 Surcharge and 2015 and 2016 Project Approvals
 Summary of Order No. 25,751
 Issued January 12, 2015

In an order nisi issued today, the Commission granted the relief requested in the petition of Aquarion Water Company of New Hampshire, Inc. (Aquarion), which requested approval of the 2015 WICA surcharge of 2.5386%, approval of the 2015 WICA projects, and approval of the 2016 projects. The petition and subsequent docket filings, other than any information for which confidential treatment is requested or granted by the Commission, are posted to the Commission's website at <http://www.puc.nh.gov/Regulatory/Docs/docket201414-300.html>. The order was issued on a non-fee basis inasmuch as all interested parties received notice of the Commission's determination and have the opportunity to request a hearing prior to the effective date of the order.

Aquarion is a regulated public utility as defined by RSA 362:2 and 362:4 and provides water service to approximately 6,052 customers in the towns of Hampton, North Hampton, and Rye. In DW 08-098, the Commission approved a pilot Water Infrastructure and Conservation Adjustment (WICA) program, intended to accelerate the replacement of aging infrastructure and to allow Aquarion to recover through a surcharge on customer bills, between distribution rate cases, the fixed costs of non-revenue producing capital improvements completed and placed in service to customers. Aquarion Water Company of New Hampshire, Order No. 25,019 (September 25, 2009). The WICA pilot was extended and modified in DW 12-065, Aquarion's last rate case, Aquarion Water Company of New Hampshire, Order No. 25,539 (June 28, 2013).

On October 29, 2014, Aquarion filed a petition for approval of its 2015 WICA surcharge and its 2015-17 capital projects and supporting testimony. Aquarion requested approval of a 2015 WICA surcharge of 2.5386%, based on its completed 2013 and 2014 WICA capital projects and its planned 2016 projects, estimated in the range of $640,000 and $775,000. For informational purposes only, Aquarion submitted its preliminary budget for 2017 WICA projects.

On December 30, 2015, Staff filed its recommendations, which it had circulated to the Office of the Consumer Advocate (OCA) and the municipalities served by Aquarion, the Towns of North Hampton, Hampton and Rye. Staff recommended approval of the 2014 WICA investments and found no errors or exceptions in, and recommended approval of, Aquarion's case. On the 2015 WICA investments, Staff also recommended approval and preliminary approval of Aquarion's WICA proposed projects and budgets for 2015 and 2016, respectively. The Town of North Hampton supports Staff's recommendation. The OCA and the Town of Rye did not respond.

Also on December 30, 2015, the Town of Hampton filed an objection to the 2015 WICA surcharge based on its disagreement with the Commission's order approving the WICA pilot. Aquarion Water Company of New Hampshire, Order No. 25,019 (September 25, 2009). In the order nisi, the Commission found the 2014 projects prudent, and used and useful pursuant to RSA 378:28 and approved the proposed surcharge of 2.5386% as just and reasonable pursuant to RSA 378:7, for effect for service rendered on and after January 1, 2015.

more accurate those assessments will be. Asked if the information could be used to assess a higher value to commercial properties, which could result in more tax revenue for the city, Sullivan said, "That is not even remotely the function of what's being proposed here." City Manager John Bohlenko was not in the office Thursday. But in an email sent to city councilors Dec. 30, Bohlenko said the information the assessor was asking for was "not required by law." But he pointed out the businesses that complete the survey will "assist the assessor's office in determining actual market levels of rent, vacancy and operating expenses." Kennedy also questioned why the city had hired contractors to help with all parts of its re-appraisal properties. "We were told the whole department was hired because the city chose to bring things in-house," Kennedy said about the assessor's role in the re-appraisal process. Kennedy stressed she has no problem with the city hiring outside contractors to help with or conduct the re-appraisal, but by doing so, it leads to questions about money being spent in the assessor's office. In a November press release, the city states it hired three companies for the "re-appraisal of all property in the city." The city hired KRT Appraisal to assist in the re-appraisal of all residential properties, Property Valuation Advisors to assist in the re-appraisal of all utility property, according to the release. Allen said he didn't specifically remember any comments being made when Lentz was hired about doing re-appraisals in-house. But he said most of the work on the residential re-appraisals was now being done internally. Allen did not immediately have information available about how much the city spent to hire the three companies. The City Council is scheduled to meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. in City Council Chambers.

Seacoast expected to lead N.H. job growth

Local leaders share optimism in state report

By Paul Briand nnews@seacoastonline.com

PORTSMOUTH — Seacoast business leaders share the optimism for job growth in the region that was forecast by a state Department of Employment Security report.

The report — "New Hampshire Regional Planning Commission: Job Growth, 2012-2022" — predicts that the Seacoast region will enjoy job growth of 14.7 percent, the highest of all the planning regions in the Granite State.

The region that includes the Seacoast, according to the report, will see the fastest employment growth in what it called healthcare support occupations (26.8 percent), followed by computer and mathematical occupations (24.2 percent), healthcare practitioners and technical occupations (22.8 percent) and business and financial occupations (17.2 percent).

Doug Bates, president of the Greater Portsmouth Chamber of Commerce, said a number of factors contribute to the attractiveness of the state and this region to employers, among them the pull of the state's natural resources and the consistently high ratings of livability for families.

One leading job generator in the region has been the Pease Tradeport, and its executive director, David Mullen, did not expect to see another 4,000 jobs coming on line at Pease within the next 10 years.

"The big thing for Pease has been that the demand for the marketplace has always been strong," Mullen said. "As I've always said, the CEOs want to be 15 minutes from their home, and this has given them

"We have something that makes their employees want to come to work here," said Bates. Among the challenges he sees to maintain the kind of growth predicted by the report are the need for start-up manufacturing space, the need to maintain the infrastructure of roads and bridges to get goods to market, and whether new tax structures considered by state lawmakers will help or impede future economic growth.

He also cites the legalization of casino gambling as a possible impediment in how it might change the quality of life here. "Gambling has its pluses and minuses. I tend to be more on the minus side," said Bates. While gambling proposals have failed in the past, the issue is expected to come up again in the current session of the New Hampshire Legislature.

One aspect that Bates believes is key to future job growth is sustaining the partnership that the state's community colleges has with manufacturers. He cited in particular the job training at Great Bay Community College for employment at Albany International, a high-tech aerospace manufacturer in Rochester.

"I've been probably interested in your business and educate them and they're probably going to stick around," he said.

"The rising tide lifts all boats kind of thing," said Mullen. Mark Kaplan is a member of the governor's Live Free and Start Advisory Council, empowered to advise the governor on how best to create an inviting atmosphere for start-ups. He operates the Alpha Loll collaborative office space businesses in Portsmouth and Manchester and has a dual view of future job growth. The state jobs report cites the Southern Region, which includes Manchester, as having the second highest employment growth rate at 14.1 percent.

the opportunity to do that." Currently, according to Mullen, there are about 9,000 direct-hire jobs at the Tradeport, generating about $550 million a year in wages.

Here's his math: About 4.4 million square feet of space has already been developed at Pease, making it about 80 percent built out. Another 20 percent remains, possibly creating another 1 million square feet of space. That million square feet can accommodate about 4,000 employees, about a 14 percent increase over the next 10 years if all the developable space were built out.

"We always said the ultimate count for employees would be in the 10-to-12,000 range," said Mullen. On top of the direct hires are the other jobs in the region created by businesses at the Tradeport. Mullen cited plumbers, electricians, vendors, consultants, even the restaurant and grocery store employees. For every job at Pease, he estimates a third of a job is created elsewhere.

"It's important to bear in mind that when we say high tech that technology has become more a part of every occupation," he said.

One local company that has been busy providing employees — both permanent and temporary — to high-tech companies in the region is Market Street Talent in Portsmouth.

"We have seen a significant uptick in job requirements our clients are looking to fill and the outlook for 2015 is strong," said CEO Jennifer Gray. "In response to increased demand for our placement services, Market Street Talent has added to our core staff to accommodate the growing needs of our tech community."

"It's clear there's a fairly broad recognition across the state and government, as well, that having qualified people available for the kinds of jobs that are going to be created is a challenge," said Kaplan.

He, too, cited the importance of the continued collaboration between community colleges and manufacturers.

"I think there's a lot more focus on the skills and expertise that we need in our work population. This is a desirable area for quality of life and for companies to locate," said Kaplan. "They'll be much more inclined to locate here when the workforce can meet their needs. You can't have one without the other and you need both of them to get it."

That alignment, according to Kaplan, needs a technological component.

"It's important to bear in mind that when we say high tech that technology has become more a part of every occupation," he said.

LEGAL NOTICE STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION DW 14-300 AQUARIUM WATER COMPANY OF NEW HAMPSHIRE, INC. Water Infrastructure and Conservation Adjustment 2015 Surcharge and 2015 and 2016 Project Approvals Summary of Order #141 No. 26,791 Granting Petition January 12, 2015 In an order nhl issued today, the Commission granted the relief requested in the petition of Aquarion Water Company of New Hampshire, Inc. (Aquarion), which included approval of the 2015 WICA surcharge of 2.5386%, approval of the 2015 WICA projects, and preliminary approval of the 2016 projects. The petition and subsequent docket filings, other than any information that the Commission is required to disclose or granted by the Commission, are posted to the Commission's website at http://www.puc.nh.gov/Regulatory/Docket/2014/14-300.html. The order was issued on a basis where any interested parties receive notice of the Commission's determination and have the opportunity to request a hearing prior to the effective date of the order. Aquarion is a regulated public utility defined by RSA 362:2 and 362:4 and provides water services to approximately 9,956 customers in the Towns of Hampton, North Hampton, and Rye. In DW 08-096, the Commission approved a pilot Water Infrastructure Adjustment (WICA) program, intended to accelerate the replacement of aging infrastructure and to allow Aquarion to recover through a surcharge on customer bills, between distribution line cases, the total cost of non-revenue producing capital improvements completed and placed in service to customers. Aquarion Water Company of New Hampshire, Order No. 25:019 (September 25, 2009). The WICA pilot was extended and modified in DW 12-085, Aquarion's last rate case. Aquarion Water Company of New Hampshire, Order No. 25:539 (June 28, 2013). On October 29, 2014, Aquarion filed a petition for approval of its 2015 WICA surcharge and its 2015-17 capital projects and supporting testimony. Aquarion requested approval of a 2015 WICA surcharge of 2.5386%, based on its completed 2013 and 2014 WICA capital projects and effective for service on and after January 1, 2015. Aquarion also requested approval of its planned 2015 capital expenditures, estimated to be in a cost range of $65.00 million to $1.074 million, and preliminary approval of its planned 2016 projects, estimated in the range of between $64,000 and $775,000. For informational purposes only, Aquarion submitted its preliminary budget for its 2015 WICA projects. On December 30, 2015, Staff filed its recommendations, which it had circulated to the Office of the Consumer Advocate (OCA) and the municipalities served by Aquarion, the Towns of North Hampton and Rye. Staff recommended approval of the 2014 WICA investments and found no errors or exceptions in, and recommended approval of, Aquarion's calculation of the 2015 WICA surcharge. Staff also recommended approval and preliminary approval of Aquarion's OCA proposed projects and budgets for 2015 and 2016. The Town of North Hampton supported Staff's recommendation. The OCA and the Town of Rye did not respond. Also on December 30, 2015, the Town of Hampton filed an objection to the 2015 WICA surcharge based on its disagreement with the Commission's order approving the WICA pilot. Aquarion Water Company of New Hampshire, Order No. 25:019 (September 25, 2009). In the order nhl, the Commission found the 2014 projects prudent, and used useful pursuant to RSA 378:28 and approved the proposed surcharge of 2.5386% as just and reasonable pursuant to RSA 378:7, for effect for service rendered on and after January 1, 2015. With regard to the projects proposed for 2016, which are presented for review and final approval, and the projects proposed for 2015, which are presented for review and preliminary approval, the Commission agreed with the Staff and the Town of North Hampton, who recommend final and preliminary approval of these projects as proposed by Aquarion. To ensure that all interested parties receive notice of this docket and have an opportunity to request a hearing, the Commission delayed the effectiveness of its approval until January 26, 2015. All persons interested in responding to such comments and requests for hearing shall do so no later than January 23, 2015. Any party interested in any comments and requests for hearing received, the Commission may further extend the effective date of its approval. The Commission's approval shall become final and effective January 26, 2015, unless the Commission orders otherwise.

Seacoast expected to lead N.H. job growth

By Paul Briand news@seacoastonline.com

PORTSMOUTH — Seacoast business leaders share the optimism for job growth in the region that was forecast by a state Department of Employment Security report.

The report — "New Hampshire Regional Planning Commissions Project Employment Growth, 2012-2022" — predicts that the Rockingham region will enjoy job growth of 14.7 percent, the highest of all the planning regions in the Granite State.

The region that includes the Seacoast, according to the report, will see the fastest employment growth in what it called health care support occupations (26.8 percent), followed by computer and mathematical occupations (24.2 percent), health care practitioners and technical occupations (22.5 percent) and business and financial occupations (17.2 percent).

Doug Bates, president of the Greater Portsmouth Chamber of Commerce, said a number of factors contribute to the attractiveness of the state and this region to employers, among them the pull of the state's natural resources and the consistently high ratings of livability for families.

"We know something that makes their employees want to come to work here," said Bates.

Among the challenges he sees to maintain the kind of growth predicted by the report are the need for start-up manufacturing space, the need to maintain the infrastructure of roads and bridges to get goods to market, and whether new tax structures considered by state lawmakers will help or impede future economic growth.

He also cites the legalization of casino gambling as a possible impediment in how it might change the quality of life here. "Gambling has its pluses and minuses. I tend to be more on the minus side," said Bates. While gambling proposals have failed in the past, the issue is expected to come up again in the current session of the New Hampshire Legislature.

One aspect that Bates believes is key to future job growth is sustaining the partnership that the state's community colleges has with manufacturers. He cited in particular the job training at Great Bay Community College for employment at Albany International, a high-tech aerospace manufacturer in Rochester.

"Get somebody interested in your business and educate them and they're probably going to stick around," he said.

One leading job generator in the region has been the Pease Tradeport, and its executive director, David Mullen, did some math that estimated another 4,000 jobs coming on line at Pease within the next 10 years.

"The big thing for Pease has been that the demand for the marketplace has always been strong," said Mullen. "As I've always said, the CEOs want to be 15 minutes from their home, and this has given them the opportunity to do that."

Currently, according to Mullen, there are about 9,000 direct-hire jobs at the Tradeport, generating about $550 million a year in wages.

Here's his math: About 4.4 million square feet of space has already been developed at Pease, making it about 80 percent built out. Another 20 percent remains, possibly creating another 1 million square feet of space.

That million square feet can accommodate about 4,000 employees, about a 44 percent increase over the next 10 years if all the developable space were built out. "We always said the ultimate count for employees would be in the 10-to-12,000 range," said Mullen.

On top of the direct hires are the indirect hires — the other jobs in the region created by businesses at the Tradeport. Mullen cited plumbers, electricians, vendors, consultants, even the restaurant and grocery store employees. For every job at Pease, he estimates a third of a job is created elsewhere.

"It's a rising tide that lifts all boats kind of thing," said Mullen.

Mark Kapla is a member of the governor's Live Free and Start Advisory Council, expanded to include the governor on how best to create an inviting atmosphere for start-ups. He operates the Alpha Loft collaborative office space businesses in Portsmouth and Manchester and has a dual view of future job growth. The state jobs report cites the Southern Region, which includes Manchester, as having the second highest employment growth rate at 14.1 percent.

"It's clear there's a fairly broad recognition across the state and government, as well, that having qualified people available for the kinds of jobs that are going to be created is a challenge," said Kaplan.

He, too, cited the importance of the continued collaboration between community colleges and manufacturers.

"I think there's a lot more focus on the skills and expertise that we need in our work population. This is a desirable area for quality of life and for companies to locate," said Kaplan. "They'll be much more inclined to locate here when the workforce can meet their needs. You can't have one without the other and you need both of them to work. It's a long-term process to get them aligned better."

That alignment, according to Kaplan, needs a technological component.

"It's important to bear in mind that when we say high tech that technology has become more a part of every occupation," he said.

One local company that has been busy providing employees — both permanent and temporary — to high-tech companies in the region is Market Street Talent in Portsmouth.
